east stairway, and, at a signal from the leader, announced by a farfare of trum-pets the approach of the President and pets the approx Mrs. Roosevelt.

Col. Bromwell, Maj. McCawley and the eight other officers preceded the President and his wife to the blue room, where the throng parted to allow the receiving party passage to the line between the south windows. Following the President and Mrs. Roosevelt walked the Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Root, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Shaw, the Sec etary of War and Mrs. Taft, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Cortelyou, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Bonaparte, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Hitchcock and the Secre-tary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Met-

The first official greeting was extended by the President and his wife to the Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks and the members with a white hat, her nieces, the Misses of the cabinet and their ladies. Then Mrs. Bourke, wearing light all 's and large white Fairbanks took her place at Mrs. Roose-telt's right, Mrs. Root and the other women special attention from old and new friends. She was handsomely gowned in a Parls dress of white broadcloth and heavy crochet lace, the bodice having delicate touches of gilt braid interwoven in the lace.

Ladies' of the Diplomatic Corps.

Mme. Hengelmuller, wife of the Austrian ambassador, wore a rich tollet of light gray taffeta and a hat trimmed with white Mme. Jusserand and Lady Durand were also in light tollets. Baroness von Sternberg wore a light gray satin and a tip-tilted hat in white tuile, wreathed in roses. Madame Nabuco wore a dark velvet cos-

Madame Seger also chose a gray costume with a white hat, her nieces, the Misses hats. Mrs. Howard Reeside wore a white cloth costume and a white lace hat, trimmed of the cabinet filling the rest of the receiving line. The Secretary of State following time-honored custom, made the introduc-tions of the diplomatic corps to the President, which duty being accomplished shortly left for his own home, accompanying his wife and daughter and their guest, Miss Janet McCook of New York.

MRS. ROOSEVELT. (Copyright, 1905, by Towles.)

The Supreme Court.

When the last of the foreigners had passed into the blue room the Supreme Court was ready in the red room to be received. The rapidity with which each honored body assembled and passed through the blue room was accomplished with the greatest exactness and comfort to all concerned.

Handsome Toilets.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a very dainty dress of light blue chiffon, the thin material showing a white silk foundation. There were rows and rows of fluffy ruffles around the full skirt, which fell from a shirred girdle. A touch of white lace showed on the waist, and her jewels were limited to a few diamond crnaments. As is her custom, she carried bunch of white roses and iflies of the valley.

Mrs. Fairbanks was also dressed in chiffon cloth, the color being a pale mauve, the skirt falling full from the waist line and trimmed with flat folds of panne velvet. She, as well as the cabinet women, carried flowers, having thereby their hands too full for handshaking. Mrs. Root wore a dark gren chiffon velvet, the bedicehaving a square yoke, in which a white lace guimpe had touches of let and gilt in its trimming

Mrs. Shaw wore another of the pretty mauve dresses, the fabric a thin one, and the corsage trimmed with lace and with velvet in shades of violet.

Mrs. Taft were pale blue taffeta silk, much tucked and shirred.

with white plumes. The Baroness Moncheur wore black, both dress and hat the Swiss minister, Mr. Leo Vogel and Mr. A. de Pury; the Argentine Republic minister, Madame Godoy wore steel gray satin and a white hat, Miss Mercedes Godoy being in pale blue silk. Madame Calderon wore gray satin and a Senor Don Epifanio Portela, Senora de Portela, Commander Luis A. Lan, naval atblack and white hat.

The Diplomatic Corps.

The Austrian ambassador, Mr. Ladislaus Hengelmuller von Hengevar, as acting dean of the corps, had the honor of preceding the body to the blue room today because the Italian ambassador, Baron Mayor Mr. Moriz von Szent-Ivany, and Count Josef Wenckhelm, secretary and attaches. The French ambassador was accompa-nied by Mme. Jusserand, Commander de Faramond de Lafajole, naval attache, and Viscountess de Faramond de Lafajole, and Capt. Fournier, the military attache. With the German ambassador, Baron Speck von Sternburg, were the Baroness von Sternburg, Baron von dem Bussche-Haddenhausen and Baroness Bussche, Com-mander Hebbinghaus, naval attache; Frau Hebbinghaus, Maj. Korner, military atattache, and Herr Graf von Bressler, secretary of embassy.

The British ambassador, the Right Hon. Sir H. M. Durand, was accompanied by Lady Durand, Miss Durand and Miss Ever-ild Durand, Mr. Walter Beaupre Townley, Lady Townley, Col. H. J. Foster, military attache, Capt. F. E. C. Ryan, naval attache, and Mrs. Ryan.

The Brazilian ambassador, Mr. Joaquin Nabuco, who took part in the pageant for the first time, was accompanied by Mme. Nabuco, Mr. Slyveno Gurgel do Amaral, first secretary; Mme. Gurgel do Amaral, Maj. A. V. de Pedernelsas, military attache, and Mme. de Perdernelsas.

Mrs. Cortelyou were the only white dress in the line. It was fashioned of a soft all-over lace and was extremely becoming.

Mrs. Bonaparte, who took her place in the Maj. A. V. de Pederneisas, mintary attache, and Mme. de Perderneisas.

Baron Rosen, the Russian ambassador, who also participated for the first time in his present rank at a New Year reception,

Sun Sze-yec, Mr. Yung Kwai, Mrs. Yung Kwai, Mr. Li Kkoh-cheng, Mr. Wu Chang and Mr. Liang Pi-chauan; the charge d'affaires of Uruguay, Senor Don Pedro Requena Bermudez; the Paraguay legation represented by its counselor, Mr. Clifford S.

Walton, and Mrs. Walton; the Notherlands minister, Ionkheer R. de Marees von Swinderen; the Bolivian minister, with Senora de Calderon, Senorita Elena Calderon and Senor Don William Alfred Ried; the Panama minister, with Senora Donce Josefa Jovane

de Obaldia, Mr. C. C. Arosemena, Senors Obaldia J. and Jorge E. Boyd; the Guate-malan minister, Senor Don Jorge Munoz, and Senor Dr. Joaquin Vela, the Persian minister, Gen. Morteza Khan, with Mesrop Nevton Khan, secretary; Mr. H. P. Mirike-lam, attache; Mr. H. S. Reeside, counselor; Mrs. Reeside and Mr. Henry C. Finkelstein; way and Madame Hauge. Owing to the condition of affairs in Korea, that lega-tion was not represented at the reception.

Mrs. Wm. H. Taft.

Diplomatic Uniforms and Decorations. Standing as they do as the personal representatives of their sovereigns or governments and as individuals of great achievements in diplomacy or statecraft, or of military or naval renown, the ambassadors and ministers today paying their respects to the President have taken part in the most ceremonial of American customs, one which is yet the simplest function with which any nation in the world surrounds such an important event. The progress of each person from the street to the presence of the chief executive, while it is so little hampered by polite obstructions in the way of servitors and attendants, was yet prepared for as magnificently by each foreign representa-tive as if the audience was with a ruler to meet whom hundreds of retainers of high and low degree had to be passed. The cos tumes, whether those ordained by each country to be worn in its diplomatic service or whether it represented the field day of glory of its military or naval owner, are the same their wearers would don for royalty. The diplomatic uniform as a rule differs only in its glittering magnificence of embroidery. cloth is black or dark blue, the em co, Senor Don Balbino Davalos and Senor Don Jose Castellot, jr., and Senor Don Manuel Zapata Vera, jr., secretaries, accompanied Senor Godoy and party.

Signor Giulio Cesare Montagna, sectary and charge d'affaires of the Italian embassy, was accompanied by Count G. B. Nani Morcenigo, attache; Signor Roberto Centaro and Prof. Antonio Ravaili of the staff.

Following the ambassadors came the looks always as if it had been turned out by one hand.

The court dress of ambassadors shows much more embroidery than that worn by ministers. A still lesser degree than the ars. Charles G. Bonaparte.

latter ornaments the costume of the sec-retaries and attaches. In each instance, however, the personal touch is the ribboned decorations, medals or orders the proud re-ciplent is entitled to wear, and which rep-resent the favor of his own or some other sovereign or government, and which in many cases are of great intrinsic value. But there are countries like our own where such testimonials are not permissible, and where a man's uniform without further ad-ditions must stand alone for his achieve-

The Austrian ambassador, Mr. Ladislaus Hengelmuller von Hengervar, who is the acting dean of the diplomatic corps, appeared today in the very striking Hun-garian court dress, of which a dark red velgarian court dress, of which a dark red veivet cape, worn only over one shoulder and suspended by bunches of rich cord and tassels, is a most picturesque finish. Baron Rubido Zichy and Mr. Von Szent-Irany were also in the court costumes appropriate to their rank, while Count Josef Wenckheim were the dashing uniform of licutenant of an Austro-Hungary cavalry regiment of hussers.

of hussars.
The French ambassador, M. Jusserand wore with his uniform, which is that pre-scribed for French ambassadors, several decorations, that of the Legion of Honor and of the Dannebrog, this latter by grace of the King of Denmark, being especially noticeable. The military attache of the embassy, Capt. Fornier, were his uniform as captain of artillery, with the Legion of Honor decoration, and Commander de Far-amond de Lafajole that of his rank and ikewise his Legion of Honor medal

Mrs. George B. Cortelyou.

No more striking uniform is ever seen at the White House than that which adorned the white House than that which adorned the slight, almost boyish figure of his excellency Freiherr Speck von Sternburg, the German ambassador. It is that of a major of the Saxon regiment of hussars, Koenigin Carola, and is of light blue with silver embroidery. His decorations were the Prussian Order of the Red Eagle, second class with oak leaves: the Order of the class, with oak leaves; the Order of the Prussian Crown, first class; the Saxon Dienstauszeichnungskreuz; the Chinese Order of the Dragon, the Austro-Hungarian Order of Franz Joseph and the Russian Order of St. Anne. Freiherr von dem Bussche-Haddenhausen, counselor of embassy, wore the court dress of the Hannoverian nobility-red, with blue and gold-with these decorations: The Prussian Order of the Red Eagle, fourth class; the decoration of an officer of the Order of Oranien-Nassau (Netherland); the decora-tion of a Knight of the Swedish Order of the North Star; Turkish Medjidle, second Commander Hebbinghaus, naval attache, wore his uniform of a commander of the imperial navy, with these decorations: The Prussian Order of the Red Eagle, fourth class; the Order of the Prussian Crown, third class; the Prussian Dienstauszeichnungskreuz and the decoration of a Knight of the Order of the Italian Crown. Major Koerner, military attache, wore his uniform of a major of the Prussian great general staff, with these decorations: The Prussian Order of the Red Ragle, fourth class; the decoration of a Knight of the class; the decoration of a knight of the Order of the Wurtemberg Crown, of an officer of the Saxon Albrechts Kreuz with the crown and of a Knight of the Bavarian Militair-Verdiens (kreuz, first class).

Mrs. Victor H. Metcalf.

Graf von Bressler, third secretary, wore his uniform of lieutenant of the reserve of the Prussian regiment of hussars, Koenig Wilhelm I, dark blue with gold—with the decoration of the Russian order of St. Stanislaus, second class.

and Mr. S. Gurgel do Amaral, the first sec-retary, wore the coronation medal of King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra, which Mr. Nabuco, who was then the Brazilian minister to England, and Mr. do Amaral, then second secretary of legation, received at that time. Lieut. Col. de Pederneiras, the military attache, wore his uniform, which is that of the Brazilian mounted ar-tillery.

tillery.

Baron Rosen, the Russian ambassador, appeared in the regulation court dress of broadcloth, trimmed elaborately in gold embroidery. He wore many handsome decorations, medals of orders of which he had been the proud recipient through many years of diplomatic service.

The members of the embassy of Italy wore the diplomatic uniform of their country, corresponding to their respective rank. Signor Montagna, the charge d'affaires, wore also the Order of Knight of the Crown of Italy and the Order of Knight of Charies the Third of Spain, and Count Nani Macenigo, attache, wore the Order of Macenigo, attache, wore the Order of Knight of Wasa and of Knight of the Senor Don Jose F. Godoy, minister to Cuba and first secretary of the Mexican embassy, wore a diplomatic uniform, which in the Mexican service is a very handsome one. The secretaries and attaches of the embassy wore the uniform of their rank. The Haltian minister, Mc. Leger, whose long service here ranks him third among the ministers, were the diplomatic uniform of his country—as did his secretary of legation, Mr. Thoby.

The Persian minister, Gen. Morteza Khan, wore the usual diplomatic uniform of his country—much gold embroidery on black cloth and a fez of black lamb's wool. Across his breast from the right shoulder to the left hip was a broad green sash. His deco-rations were among the finest seen. The miniature portrait of the shah, framed in five rows of diamonds and hanging from a bow knot of diamonds, and worn just below the collar, was, without exception, the most elegant ornament seen on any diplo-mat. His medals and decorations were those of the Legion of Honor, the order of Leopold of Belgium, several first-class military stars, and others from the Persian minister of instruction, and from the Emperor of Austria. The minister of Guatemala, Senor Don Gorge Munoz, were the uniform of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of his country, and the decoration of commander of the royal and distinguished order of Elizabeth, the Catholic, of Spain. Minister Corea wore the Nicaraguan uni-form of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, and the decorations of "The Bust of the Liberator" and the "Order of Public Instruction," both of which are Venezuelan orders.

The minister of Bolivia, Senor Don Ignacio Calderon, wore the regulation diplomatic uniform of his country.

The minister of Chile, Senor Don Ioaquin Walker-Martinez, and his first secretary of legation, Senor Don German Munita, wore the diplomatic uniform of their country. The minister wore also the Great try. The minister wore also the Great Cross of "Nossa Senhora de la Conceiccao de Villa Vicosa," bestowed upon him several years ago by the King of Portugal.

The Swiss minister, Mr. Leo Vogel, wore his diplomatic uniform, and the secretary of legation, Mr. A. de Pury, his military dress. No decembrance are aver worn by dress. No decorations are ever worn by members of the Swiss diplomatic service. The minister of Denmark, Mr. C. Brun, with his diplomatic uniform, which consists of a scarlet coat with gold lace, a white waistcoat and a sword, wore his decoration of the Danish Order of Danne-borg and nine foreign orders.

The Spanish diplomatic uniform is of dark blue cloth with gold braid on the sleeves and collar. With these costumes today Senor Don Luis Pastor, first secretoday Senor Don Luis Pastor, first secretary of legation and charge d'affaires, wore these orders: Charles III of Spain, Military Merit of Spain, the Lion and the Sun of Persia, the Osmandi of Turkey, Cross of the Savior of Greece. Senor Don Manuel Walls y Merino, second secretary, the following: Isabelle the Catholic of Spain, Charles III of Spain, Knight of the Temple, Legion of Honor of France.

Legion of Honor of France.
Lieut. Col. F. de Monteverde, the military attache, were the uniform of the Spanish infautry of the line, which consists of dark medal for the campaign in the Philip-nines (1897). The Siamese minister, Phya Akharaj Varadhara, wore the diplomatic dress of his country and the Order of Knight Commander of the Crown of Slam. Mr. Edward H. Loftus, the secretary of legation, on his uniform wore these orders from of Siam. Order of Leopold of Belgium, White Elephont of Siam. Order of Leopold of Belgium, White Elephant of Siam, Orange, Nassau, Harvard.

The erect, scholarly form of Mr. Eki Hioki, charge d'affaires of Japan, wore a uniform of black broadcloth. Conforming to the regular court dress the coat was swallowtail style with cuffs and collar beautifully adorned with a scroll pattern of gold embroidered leaves and flowers of the Paulownia Imperialis, the imperial tree of Jaembroidered leaves and flowers of the Paulownia Imperialis, the imperial tree of Japan. There was a similar decoration in the back at the waist line about four inches square and also on the pocket flaps. The same design is also used on the glit but-tons, nine in number, which were placed a little to the left of the opening of the coat, which was fastened with invisible hooks and eyes. A band of gold half an inch wide outlined the coat, also the cuffs, colwide outlined the coat, also the culls, col-lar and pocket flaps. The trousers were striped on either side with gold braid an inch wide. The hilt of the sword was gilt and had the same design as the buttons, excepting that a phoenix head, a symbol of good luck, was added. A Louis XIV hat of black beaver, with a black plume stretching from the front to the back and a black slik rosette and gold embroidery ornamenting the left side, completed the costume.

Baron Moncheur wore a dark blue uni-form of the style used by plenipotentiaries mounted and adorned with gold braid. There were ten different decorations, including the great cross of the Order of the Lion and Sun of Persia. Baroness Mon-cheur was gowned in black on account of court mourning which prevails throughout the Belgian empire. The attaches of the embassy were dressed in uniforms of dark blue broadcloth and gold braid.

The Chinese minister, Sir Chentung Li-ang-Cheng, wore a rich costume of dark blue satin absolutely covered with gold embroldery. The cap was the red button em-blematic of his rank. The attaches of the legation were gayly arrayed in similar tones of dark blue and gilt, with caps of the blue button.
The minister from Colombia, Senor Mendoza, and Senor Triana, the first secretary of the legation, were attired in full dress. Mme. Triana was becomingly gowned in brown chiffon velvet.

Senor Veloz, charge d'affaires of Venez-uela, was attired in full dress, as was also #### the Cuban minister, Senor Quesada. Army and Navy.

Resplendent in brilliant uniforms of blue and gold, with trimmings of scarlet, yellow or white, according to the arm of the service, the distinctly military portion of the moving line at the White House today was an interesting and picturesque feature of the occasion. As usual, by virtue of seniority of organization, the army had the right of the military line, followed by the navy and closing with the Marine Corps. Each branch of the service was fully represented, nearly all the officers sta-tioned in this city or immediate vicinity not incapacitated by sickness, being in the line, spick and span in full-dress uniform, in-spick and span in full-dress uniform, including side arms.

Officers of the army assembled at the office of the chief of staff at the War Department and officers of the navy and Marine Corps at the bureau of navigation at the Navy Department. They formed in pairs in the order of precedence and marched to the White House by way of the west entrance to the grounds opposite the Navy Department. The hour set for their reception by the President was 11:45 o'clock and they were on hand with soldier-like and they were on hand with soldier-like promptitude.

general of subsistence, were Majors Gallagher and Hart and Capts. Henry and Cole.

Representing the medical department were General O'Relily, Colonels Heizman and Hoff, Majors Borden, Edie, Kean, McCaw, Glennon, Ireland, Mason, Duval, Smart and Delaney. Paymaster General Dodge was acompanied by General Bates, retired; Colonel Whipple, Majors Houston and Pickett and Captain Fenton.

General Mackenzle, chief of engineers, walked with Gen. J. M. Wilson, retired, and was followed by Colonel Hoxle, Majors Abbott, Hodges, Kuhn, Captains Cosby, Sewell, Kutz and Lieutenant Poole and others.

The ordnance department was represented by General Crozier, Major Russell and Captains Montgomery, Wheeler, Horney, Dickson and Forney; the signal corps by General Greely, Colonel Allen and Captain Gibbs, and the insular bureau by Colonel Edwards and Captains Taylor and McIntire.

Then followed the officers attached to the 12th Caustley and the academic attached to the 12th Caustley and the

Then followed the officers attached to the 18th Cavalry and the 3d and 4th Bat-teries, Field Artillery, stationed at Fort Myer; the 2d Battalion of Engineers at Washington Barracks; the artillery offi-cers stationed at Forts Washington and Hunt, and various other officers on de-tached duty or on leave of absence in this velt, who was with the receiving party.

The representation of the Senate today was very large. Vice President Fairbanks, president of the Senate, was one of the early callers, and his tall form was conspicuous. Among the Senators who called were Senators Hale, Alger, Allison, Bacon, Beveridge, Brandegee, Bulkley, Burkett, Burroughs, Carter, Crane, Dillingham, Dolliver, Frye, Fulton, Gallinger, Hansbrough, Hemmenway, Heyburn, Kittredge, Lodge, Long, MacCumber, Martin, Millard, Nelson, Newlands, Nixon, Overman, Perkins, Pyle, Proctor, Spooner, Stone, Warren and Wetmore.

As Senator Gerin of Oregon was called away from the city he was unable to meet his colleague, Senator Fulton, who had arranged to pass through the line with him.

An unusually large representation of the House was headed by Speaker Cannon. The popularity of the Speaker was evidenced on this as on many other occasions. He was probably the recipient of more good wishes than any one except the President himself. Any one who noticed Mr. Cannon as he moved about the east room would have supposed that he was holding a reception himself.

An effort was made to have members of city. Colonel Wallace headed the delegation from Fort Myer and Major Burr the delegation from Washington Barracks. Others were Gens. Hains and Ernst of the isthmian canal commission.

ARMY OFFICERS IN LINE.

With the army line were Gen. Harries, commanding the District militia, and Cols. Petit and Bret of the general staff. Gen. Harries was accompanied by his son Cadet Harries, who is home from the Military Academy on leave of absence on account of sickness Although not so numerous, the naval and Marine Corps contingent compared favor-ably in appearance and bearing with the army delegation. Owing to illness Admiral Dewey, the ranking officer, was not in the line and his place at the head of the line was taken by Rear Admiral Rodgers, the senior officer present, who was accompanied by Capt. Potter, assistant chief of the bureau of navigation.

Among those in the line were Rear Admirals Lamberton, Mason, Endicott, Man-ney, Capps and Rae, Paymaster General Harris, Surgeon General Rixey, Judge Advocate General Diehl, Commander Hubbard, Commander Dixon, Paymaster McGowan, Medical Inspector Du Bose, Admiral Chester, Capt. Swinburn, Capt. Pendleton, Capt. Swift, Capt. Schroeder, Capt. Wainwright, Capt. Berry, Capt. Balley, Lieut. Commander Ackerman, Gen. Elliot, commandant of the Marine Corps; Lieut. Col. Barnett, U. S. M. C.; Commander Beatty, Medical Director infautry of the line, which consists of dark blue tunic, red breeches with parted black stripe, top boots, sword and spurs, and these orders and medals: Maria Christina of Spain, Military Merit of Spain, Medal of the Carlist War (1871-1874), Order of Altonso XII of Spain, the "Christ" of Portugal, medal for the campaign in Cuba (1896), meet Chandler, Lieut, Commander Chapin, Commander Combs, Capt. Cowles, Civil Engineer Cunningham, Capt. Dayton, Col. gal, medal for the campaign in Cuba (1896), Denny, U. S. M. C.; Medical Director Dickinson, Lieut. Commander Dieffenbach, Medical Director Dixon, Capt. Dutton, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. Commander Eberle, Prof. Eichelberger, Commander Eldridge, Lieut, Commander Ellicott, Lieut. Commander Fenton, Commander Fremont, Commander Glennon

Col. Goodloe, U. S. M. C.; Commander Gove, Lleut. Commander Griffin, Capt. Gullck, U. S. M. C.; Capt. Harding, U. S. M. C.; Prof. Harshman, Lieut. Commander Hay-ward, Lieut. Commander Holmes, Lieut. Commander Hughes, Pay Inspector dunt, Lieut. Commander Jones, Lieut. Commander Kittelle, Commander Knight, Lieut. Commander Latimer, Col. Lauchheimer, U.S. M. C.; Maj. Lejeune, U.S. M. C.; Capt. Leutze, Naval Constructor Linnard, Pay Director Littlefield, Medical Inspector Mc-Clurg, Commander McLean, Maj. McLe-more, U. S. M. C.; Maj. Magill, U. S. M. C.: Medical Director Marmion, Commander Nelson, Capt. Norris, Commander Osterhaus, Commander Parks, Rear Admiral Perry, Naval Constructor Zahm, Lieut, Commander Wood, Medical Director Wise, Lieut, Commander Washington, Lieut, Commander Vogelgesang, Command-Vreeland, Pay Inspector Sullivan, Com-nander Staunton, Lieut, Commander Snowlen, Lieut. Commander Sims, Capt. Roose-elt, U. S. M. C.; Capt. Rodgers, Lieut. Col. Richards, U. S. M. C., and Lieut. Commander Wilson.

District of Columbia Militia. Accompanying the officers of the army, the House form in the line so that state delegations would be together, but in spite of this many of them were scattered. There was a large Ohio delegation. Representa-tives Longworth, Goebel, Nevin, Campbell, Southard, Grosvenor, Burton and Beidler were among the party. New York also was largely represented. Representative Payne, the republican floor leader, was a conspicuous figure among the New Yorkers, and among others were Representatives Fitzgerald, Calder, Bradley, Sherman, Wadsworth, Alexander and Vreeland. It was noted that the southern states were all in evidence in the line to quite as full an extent as other sections of the country. Representative Brownlow of Tennessee, Representative Gillett of California, Representa-tive Julius Kahn of California, Representative McLachlan, Representative Bonynge of California, Representative Hill of Connecticut, Representative Sperry of Connecticut, Representative Madden of Illinois, Representative Foster, Representative Watson, Representative Overstreet, Representative Charles Landis and Representative Frederick Landis, all of Indiana, were among the callers. In the Iowa delegation were Representatives Dawson, Cousins, Hepburn, Lacey, Hull and Howden.

Representative Curtis of Kansas was among the callers, as also were Represen-tatives Calderhead and Bowersock of the same state. Kentucky was represented by Representatives Richardson, Bennett and others. Representatives Powers and A. Allen of Maine and Representatives Townse. William Alden Smith and Loud of Michigan were on hand. Among the Minnesota delegation were Representatives McCleary, Stevens and others. Representative Dalzeli Pennsylvanians.

The District of Columbia.

The District of Columbia was fully represented. President Macfarland of the Board of Commissioners of the District, Commissioner West and Commissioner Biddle were all there.

The judicial officers of the District were all present, including Judge Kimball of the Police Court and Judge Mullowny, the new-ly appointed incumbent of the local police The newly appointed justices of the peace were also in line, and among others were United States Attorney Daniel W. Baker and Assistant United States Attorneys Ralph Given, Jesse C. Adkins, Stuart MacNamara, Charles H. Turner and J. S. Easby-Smith. United States Marshal Au-lick H. Palmer, Register of Wills James Regents of the Smitshonian.

The regents of the Smithsonian Institution were represented in the receiving line by former Curator John B. Henderson and Alexander Graham Bell. Many of the other regents are members of either the Senate or the House or in positions which required their presence elsewhere in the line. Commissioners John C. Black, Alfred W.

Cooley and Henry F. Greene of the civil

A LONG LINE FOR THE PUBLIC RECEPTION.

navy and Marine Corps were Brig. Gen. service commission were given an unusual-George H. Harries, commanding the District of Columbia Militia: Lieut, Col. Lloyd M. Bret, adjutant general of the District militia; Capt. Andrew Parker, aid-de-camp of Gen. Harries' personal staff; Lleut, Col. James S. Pettit, 8th Infantry, United States army, who is on special duty, as instructor, with the local brigade of citizen soldiery, and Gen. Harries' son, Mr. Her-bert L. Harries, of the United States Corps of Cadets, who is home on leave of ab-sence from the West Point Military Academy. Congressional Representation.

MRS. FAIEBANKS.

The full dress uniform of the Russian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Stantislaus, second class.

The full dress uniform of the Bussian order of 8t. Sta each of them is his personal friend. Commissioner Cooley has the distinction of using the desk at the offices of the comsion that was formerly used by President Roosevelt when he was a civil service commissioner.

This piece of office furniture, which is rather antiquated and was old when the President first got the use of it, is especially valued by the commission because of a strip of paper pasted on it, bearing the sig-nature of Mr. Roosevelt. When the effects of the commission were moved from the court house to their present quarters Mr. court house to their present quarters Mr. Roosevelt himself put his name on the desk in order that he should not lose it. These little incidents are occasionally referred to, and Mr. Cooley felt an especial privilege in greeting the President, as he sits at his own desk every day.

Mr. Frank M. Kiggins, chief examiner of the commission, and Mr. John Doyle, secretary of the commission were also in the line of callers.